

Lim Hng Kiang

An engineering graduate of Cambridge University, Lim Hng Kiang spent nine years in the Singapore Armed Forces where he held both command and staff positions. In 1985, he earned a master's degree in Public Administration at Harvard University and returned to serve as the deputy secretary in the Defence and National Development ministries before entering politics in 1991. He held Cabinet posts in National Development, Health, Foreign Affairs, Finance and the Prime Minister's Office before his appointment as Minister for Trade and Industry in 2004.